

PITTSBURGH TRIBUNE-REVIEW

Back-to-school shopping goes high-tech

Back-to-school shopping has come a long way since the days when slide rules were a high-tech item.

In case you don't remember them, they were the manually operated predecessor of some of the sophisticated calculators now on the market.

But in this era of the lithium battery, high-tech school tools give life to students as they get through their work as well as enjoy easier moments.

A PLACE TO MAKE IT ALL WORK

Don't forget the basics.

Ultimately, a student has to store that gear somewhere and find a good seat to do some work.

The online firm known as CSN Stores is marketing a work center from Techni Mobili which is a multilevel tower to fit any dorm room. It also has a keyboard shelf with a safety stop with room for a mouse and pad. It sells for $119.99 at csnstores.com.
