LONG ISLAND LIVING

pampered pets

| By Mary Stipe |

Pets are part of the family — they sleep on the furniture, demand that breakfast is served up on schedule, and won't take no for an answer when they really, really want something. Sounds a bit like young children, doesn't it? Because we love our pets, we want them to be healthy and happy, so we tend to be on a first-name basis with the vet. And if we pamper them to excess, well, that's okay. They pamper us, too, with love, companionship and lots of great photo ops.

Kitty Cuisine

Your favorite feline will feel very privileged, indeed, when dining from this fab double bowl by renowned designer Miriam Mirri for Alessi. The Tigrito Cat Bowl features a playful cartoon-like kitty sculpture in the center of a double dish. The tail-cum-handle facilitates filling and movement. Made of polypropylene plastic and steel, the bowl features removable stainless-steel inserts for easy cleaning. The Tigrito Cat Bowl is available for $70 in turquoise, yellow or black, from www.allpetfurniture.com.
