

You might want to elect to join the Obama party

Updated: January 13, 2009, 9:29 PM EST

Thousands of Barack Obama T-shirts, mugs and totes are being sold, designed with everything from the artistic "Hope" logo to goofy sayings like "Barackin? Out."

But in the last few weeks, hundreds of new Obama products have been released in anticipation of next week's presidential inauguration.

The official stuff

Official inauguration merchandise is available at pic2009.org/picstore.

Unique items include a $130 Chicago Bulls-colored basketball jersey with the name Obama and the number 44 on it (he's the 44th president); a $6 presidential coloring book; and an $82 china plate with the inauguration logo. All of the products are made in the United States, the Web site states.

For inauguration party

You can have Obama attend your inauguration party if you buy the life-size cutout of him ($34.99 at csnstores.com/asp/show_collection.asp?XnID=26279). For added laughs, they also sell John McCain, George W. Bush, Hillary Clinton and others.
