

Look to the symbolism of the sun, and you just might find the solutions we need to face the reality of the recession. The sun can provide the warmth, energy, and happiness we need, even when skies are gray. And let's face it, these days, the skies are often gray.

This certainly helps explain why furniture and fashion in '09 are shifting toward the sun's color of comfort: Yellow. The color industry's trend-setter, Pantone, declared yellow the new "in" color for 2009 and plenty of décor mavens, industry influencers and furniture manufacturers have embraced the trend. The Washington Post also highlighted this trend in a recent article entitled, "In Times So Mellow, A Burst of Yellow," where they showcased the fact that yellow has become the new symbol of hope. Even Michelle Obama reflected the trend when she donned a yellow dress during the inauguration.

In honor of Hope, CSN Stores' knowledgeable and caring e-retail experts have compiled "CSN's Say Yes to Yellow List" of bright, inspiring items. The selection was chosen from over 1 million products, and more than 200 top-name Web sites. From pet lamps and shag rugs, to baby blankets and lunar lights, these yellow items are designed to brighten any mood, and maybe even inspire a few laughs.
